2nd Generation OneHome™ Solution Introduced by HomeLogic

Marblehead, MA September 7, 2004 HomeLogic, LLC introduces the 2nd Generation of its OneHome™ Management and Control Solutions.

The 2nd Generation solutions reduce installation time and complexity, increase configuration flexibility, and make the OneHome solutions more affordable. New products include a new system enclosure, controller, networking modules, and software packaging.

“Our 2nd Generation products were driven in part by the valuable feedback from our dealers and home owners,” stated HomeLogic co-founder Buddy Duncan. “The new generation of the OneHome solution hardware significantly reduces installation time and helps the installer deliver much cleaner packaging for the homeowner. By integrating, for example, serial-to-IP network bridges into our purpose-built controller, we’ve reduced the networking configuration and simplified the installation process.”

The new OneHome Enclosure can be ordered at rough in and the controller and Network assembly with integrated sub-system connectivity hardware can be ordered for finish. “This helps reduce the potential for damage during construction,” Buddy added.

The new HomeBrick controller comes with two (2) DB9 Serial ports, four (4) USB ports for connecting serially to sub-systems and an 80 GB of internal storage (or optional 300 GB) that may be utilized for digital audio and photo media storage. Its compact size facilitates installation in the new OneHome Enclosure, rack, or in most leading structured-wiring cabinets. The Network Assembly includes a wireless router and 20 data ports for increased networking flexibility.

The OneHome Light (“LT”) software tab offerings add an entry-level structure to the OneHome software offerings. “The LT packaging gives dealers more flexibility in configuring software options for customers and provides a lower entry price-point, thereby making the OneHome solution more affordable,” noted Jim Herman, HomeLogic co-founder.

All elements of the new OneHome solutions are available today for immediate shipping. Please visit www.homelogic.com to learn more about growing your business with OneHome™ solutions.
